About the Symposium

Humans are bilaterally symmetric animals who often use both their left as well as right side in their day to day activities. We often assess the physical capabilities of a person based on this symmetry, even going to the extent of calling a person disabled if there is a significant mismatch between both of these halves. However this is exactly the situation we are in if we assess the society around the plane of gender. In spite of women constituting about half of the world population, they are severely under-represented in our social, economic and political lives. This sort of mismatch has diseased our society by making our halves unequal. In order to harness our full capabilities, we need to strengthen this other half financial as well as legal support. This workshop will be helpful in understanding the problems faced by women and steps we should take for their upliftment. In addition to this an orientation programme on Cyber Security and Traffic Awareness is also being organized.
